The view of the Secretary of the Treasury was indicated in connection with forms prepared by Prohibition issioner Haynes outlining the effect of the Daugherty ruling. These forms were to be sent to enforcement officials everywhere and copies of them were to be submitted through the State Department to foreign Governments for distribution to foreign shipping agencies.

Inclined to More Liberal View.

When the forms reached the desk of the Secretary of the Treasury to-day, eady to be signed, he not only postponed drastic character of the forms, particu-larly the part that served notice of "convessels." A very strong impression was given that the Secretary is inclined to a more liberal view of the regulations that should be issued than is either the Attorney-General or the Prohibition Commis-

Another development of the day in connection with the all important ship ruling came in the form of an order from the Bureau of Internal Revenue, the intent of it being that all American vessels, even those that have handed over their stocks of liquor to port au-thorities, are legally permitted to recover those stocks and carry them until Octo-

Text of the Order.

Following is the text of the order of the Internal Revenue Bureau:
Foreign vessels leaving their home ports on or before October 14, 1922, and American vessels leaving foreign ports on or before October 14, 1922, having stocks of liquor aboard will be permitted to continue with such stocks without interference into foreign ports even though they touch such stocks without interference into foreign ports even though they touch the ports of the United States. However, no sales of liquor on American vessels anywhere or on foreign vessels within the territorial waters of the United States will be permitted. On publication of the opinion of the Attorney-General some American vessels lying in American harbors voluntarily surrendered their stocks of spirits to the Customs officials. In order to put all shipping upon an equality up to and including the 14th day of October, 1922, such ships will be allowed to recover their stocks of spirits and take them into foreign be allowed to recover their actual spirits and take them into foreign ports as in like conditions by foreign ships leaving their ports and American ships leaving foreign ports up to and including that date.

and including that date.

After a glance at the forms prepared by Commissioner Haynes, Secretary Mellon, expressing surprise, took steps to discuss the matter with the State Department, his view apparently being that the issuance of such a form would mean serious embarrassments with foreign governments.

Not until he has heard and has had full consultation with Secretary of State Hughes will Secretary Melion issue the notification that Mr. Haynes desires to have promulgated. It is regarded here as a certainty that before Secretary Hughes are notification that Mr. Haynes desires to have promulgated. It is regarded here as a certainty that before Secretary Mellon and Secretary Hughes are through with it the Haynes draft of the changes effected by the Daugherty ruling will be modified in important respects. An exhaustive study of the situation from the international standpoint will be made by the law officers of the Treasury in cooperation with officials of the State Department and the reaching of a conclusion may take several days.
